ASSIGNMENTS Every attempt will be made to give interns assignments that match their skill levels and the overall departmental needs where they are assigned. Interns are expected to work in and for the departments to which they are assigned unless they have prior approval from their supervisors to do otherwise. The work and overall performance of the interns generally will be judged by the same standards as those for permanent employees. This includes adherence to standard journalistic principles and ethics as well as professional decorum in areas of dress, promptness and courtesy.

FUTURE JOBS The Dallas Morning News generally requires a minimum of three to five years experience for most newsroom positions. However, interns are welcome to apply for permanent positions upon completion of their internships.

HOUSING The Dallas Morning News does not provide housing for its interns. The paper will assist interns, however, in finding reliable housing. Payment of rent and the fulfilling of all other lease requirements are the sole responsibility of the intern.

ABOUT THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS The Dallas Morning News, one of the nation's largest newspapers, published its first edition on Oct. 1, 1885. The paper is owned by Belo, a Dallas-based media company with holdings in newspaper, television, cable television and interactive media industries. The Dallas Morning News has won journalism's highest honor - the Pulitzer Prize - in 1986, 1989, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994 and 2004 for national reporting, explanatory journalism, feature photography, investigative reporting, spot news photography, international reporting and breaking news photography, respectively.

A FINAL WORD Dallas, Texas, is extremely hot during the summer. Not only should interns have a working automobile, but if at all possible, one equipped with a working air conditioner.
